THURSDAY ...... JANUARY 20, 1876.

[For the Dispatch.]

From out the dim woodland wide—
From out the shadows blended all in one—
Down into the golden gaze of eventide,
Side by side, they wandered on
Beneath the purple glories of the departing sun

Together, through the fragrance blown Across the gloaming meadowland; Together, through the whispering corn, And groves, and fields of valley land, Down into the West, they wandered hand in hand.

And they did list the surging song
That Nature from out her mysteries
Sang to youth, for they were young
And flushed with you. h's own revertes.
Blending dreamlike into golden harmonies.

The world seemed all too narrow far For souls that longed to climb To heights of which the Evening Star Did sing a spirit-chanted hymn To life triumphant o'er all the tears of time.

Touched with the glory of their birth, Their visions floated like a breath High above the wearled earth; And all the cares of earth beneath Beyond the very pale of death.

Dreams of unutterable things that bind
Man to Nature in her majesty,
Hannting in organ tones divine
The sl'ent earth, and air, and sea—
Dreams of a grandeur that shall never be.

VII. It told its story in the throbbing pain
That yearned to solve eteroits.
Heart in heart, they felt the diffi refrain
Earst into its chorus of jubilee,
Burthened with the tale of immortality.

Their thoughts did mingle with the smile
Of Day dying at the throne of Night.
Lingering with loving sense the while,
And then, like birds on weary wings, had taken For lands that lay beyond their mortal sight. IX.

Thus in dreamy quietude they passed away, Down into the west with the dying day, Until the light did fade from field and river, Wandering onward hand in hand together. Cambridge, Mass., 1876. P. A. B.

How Richmond Appeared to a New Englander.

Letter of Fred. Myron Colby to the Manchester (New Hampshire) Union Democrat.]
Despite the gloom and general depression of business which the war and its results have cast over many of the southern cities, Richmond still preserves her beauty and attraction of location. That is natual, for it owes not its creation nor its preservation to the hand of man. More enterprise might indeed render the city livelier; improvements might be made wherein Richmond would be a more desirable place of residence, but the magnificent scenery which encircles this Virginian metropolis cannot be surpassed. It still sits a very queen upon the banks of the James, with such an assemblage of striking and interesting objects in close adhesion that visitors forget all else and drink in the loveliness of the scene. Richmond is distant from Washington 117 miles, standing on the left or northeast bank of James river, 100 miles from its mouth. You reach it by means of the Richmond, Fredericksburg and Potomac railroad. The most careless observer will be struck with admiration as he sees the city lying before him. If he has g-zed upon it as I have, while the light of sunset glowed upon it, the city above impurpled by the shifting shades, the river below flashing with varied hues caught from the brilliant splendor of the western skies, he will exclaim as I did: "Vedere Napoli un poi moru," is I did: the city above impurpled by the shifting which means in this case "See Rich mond and die." I have never seen another city about which there is so much to be enraptured with of the most finely varied and animated landscapes. The town dispersed over hills of various shapes, Richmond and Shockoe Hills rising paramount and standing opposite each other, with Shockoe creek, a bold and lively stream, between them; the river descending from west to east, over half a mile in width, with beautiful islands covered with verdure obstructing the current, and ragged rocks rising in myriad forms, among which the water foams, dishes, and tumbles past the town, winding and stretching below, where it can be seen many miles to the southward, its flashing surface covered with the white-winged messengers of commerce; opposite, the little village of Manchester, crowning a verdant hill, which slopes gently to the water's edge, with green plains and stately woods sweeping beyond, a prodigious extent of wilderness, ornamented here and there with the massion of some planter or laboring busbandman-all these falling at once under the eye, and yet always under some new coloring of light and shade, present the three great requisites of landscapes, which are grandeur, beauty, and variety.

Hon. Nathaniel Wells, living in Brocke county, W. Va., goes on a visit to Eastern Virginia to day. Twenty years ago that portion of the Old Dominion was quite familiar to him, as he served as a member of the Legislature during 1848, 1849, 1851, and 1852, was also at Richmond in the winters of 1853, 1854, and 1865, endeavoring with Mr. 1853, 1854, and 1855, endeavoring with Mr.
Jesse Edgington and others to procure a charter for the erection of the railroad bill was introduced into the State Senate to punish by Imprisonment in the penitentiary any person who should endeavor to have a northern railway brought across the sacred soil, but it was not passed. Mr. Wells, it is scarcely necessary to say, was a staunch Union man during the war, and he will find many changes about Richmond and that section of Virginia which be goes to visit. We wish him a pleasant journey .- Steubenville (Ohio) Herald.

THE LAST CENT FOR A CIGAR .- " Have you any five-cent cigars?" asked an impecunious-looking fellow of an East side tobacco man yesterday. "Yes," replied the tobacconist, and he placed a handful on the show-case for the mar-whose clothing showed that he had squandered his summer if not earnings-to select from. Running his eye over the lot and without being satisfied, he asked for ten cent ones. The latter did not tickle his fancy, and assuming the airs of an Astor, he boldly inquired for fifteen-cent, ones Selecting one, he poised it between his fir-gers, and, with the tone of a played-out lifeinsurance solicitor, asked: "Would you take a man's last cent for a cigar?" The unsuspecting merchant replied that he would, and that settled the bargain, for the customer placed one cent on the show-case, bit the small end of the Havaua, applied the torch, and leisurely strolled out, puffing his high-toned cigar .- Ostoego Patladium.

We can't all afford to build cupolas on our barns, or eat oysters on the half-shell, but let us resolve with the advent of the new year to do what is right, and never speak to the men who wear a shaw! .- Fulion Times.

Chesapeake and chlo reliroad, the great thoroughfane from the ocean to the great West, situated in the most beautiful region in the State, this property can be made in a few years second to none
